ASB-CX-15.1: Control Deficiency Evaluation and Aggregation Worksheet

Instructions

This form is designed to help summarize and evaluate whether control deficiencies, individually or in combination, are significant deficiencies or material weaknesses. Complete this form by listing all control deficiencies identified during the audit, including unremediated deficiencies from prior periods.

Although the form contains a number of columns, it is not always necessary to complete every column on the form for every control deficiency identified. For example, you might complete columns 5 and 6 and conclude that a control deficiency should be considered a material weakness. If you have not identified and tested any compensating controls that mitigate the severity of that deficiency, you could skip column 8 and indicate it is a material weakness in column 9. The purpose of the form is not to force a sequential process when evaluating the classification of a control deficiency. Rather, it is to provide a process that might be helpful when performing the evaluation and aggregation required by SAS No. 115. You should be familiar with the guidance beginning at paragraph 1814.5 before completing this form.

PPC 1814 Report Issuance and Client Communications Audits of Nonpublic Companies (PPC)

1814.5 SAS No. 115 (AU 325), Communicating Internal Control Related Matters Identified in an Audit, establishes requirements for auditors to communicate certain control deficiencies that they have identified during the audit. Control deficiencies which, in the auditor's judgment, are significant deficiencies or material weaknesses should be communicated in writing to management and those charged with governance.

1814.6 SAS No. 115 establishes two requirements:

- The auditor should evaluate identified control deficiencies and determine whether, individually or in combination, they are significant deficiencies or material weaknesses.
- The auditor should communicate, in writing, to management and those charged with governance all significant deficiencies or material weaknesses identified during the audit, including those communicated in prior audits if they have not been corrected.

1814.7 Definitions SAS No. 115 contains the following definitions:

- Control Deficiency. A control deficiency exists when the design or operation of a control does not allow management or employees, in the normal course of performing their assigned functions, to prevent or detect misstatements on a timely basis. Deficiencies in design and deficiencies in operation are discussed further beginning at paragraph 1814.18.
- Significant Deficiency. A significant deficiency is a deficiency, or a combination of deficiencies, in internal control that is less severe than a material weakness, yet important enough to merit attention by those charged with governance.
- Material Weakness. A material weakness is a deficiency, or combination of deficiencies, in internal control, such that there is a reasonable possibility that a material misstatement of the entity's financial statements will not be prevented, or detected and corrected on a timely basis.

1814.8 Examples of Deficiencies A control deficiency may be either a deficiency in design or a deficiency in operation. A deficiency in design exists when a control necessary to meet the control objectives is missing or an existing control is not properly designed so that, even if the control operates as designed, the control objective would not be met. A deficiency in operation exists when a properly designed control does not operate as designed or the person performing the control does not possess the necessary authority or competence to perform the control effectively.
